

especially in the case of inscriptions relating to changes in status and administration in the Empire, and in financial affairs. It is to be expected that the selection of material relative to the Peloponnesian War period would be a little arbitrary. All who are interested in historical epigraphy will be grateful for the notes which are a feature of the inscription section, indicating now the latest restorations and now the most recent comment, such as Meiggs's own important article on certain honorary inscriptions (C.R. lxiii (1949), 9). The brief notes will be of special value to the student. To 39 add a reference to Tod's review of A.T.L. ii in J.H.S. lxix (1949), 104-5. The Tribute Lists appear as tables (divided into districts) based on A.T.L. i (with an Index of Places). It would perhaps have been well to give a specimen of the preamble (as Tod 30) to the Lists.

Section C gives a brief list of coins of historical importance with description and inscriptions; it is a pity there are no illustrations, but one cannot have everything. References (for purpose of illustration) should have been made, where possible, to Seltman, Greek Coins and to A Guide to the Principal Coins of the Greeks, for obvious reasons, rather than to Babelon's Traité or to S.N.G.

The presentation of the book is of the highest quality, in correctness of text and quality and accuracy of printing. Correct Athenaeus i. 3c on page 261 to i. 3d as on page 42.

Elsewhere in this Volume (p. 53) some energetic comment has been made on the rendering of proper names. The present reviewer is only too well aware of the pitfalls which lie in this direction. Consistency is not always possible, but is it too much to hope that moderation in the use of direct transliteration will at last prevail? Other protests have been made (cf. A.J.A. lv (1951), 115). 'Crete and Kyrene' is odd but understandable, but 'Aristoteles' is intolerable, the more so that Plutarch and Plato have retained their English dress. For the rest reference may be made to the critic mentioned above.

ALEXANDER SCHARFF, ANTON MOORTGAT: Ägypten und Vorderasien im Altertum. Pp. 535; 2 maps. Munich: Bruckmann, 1950. Cloth. DM. 18.

It was high time for a book of this kind, a conspectus of the ancient history of Egypt and the Near East; for the second edition of Eduard Meyer's monumental Geschichte des Altertums is already twenty years old, and the Cambridge Ancient History even older. This forms a section of a Weltgeschichte in Einzeldarstellungen of which eight volumes have appeared, and Kahrstedt's Geschichte des griechisch-römischen Altertums is the best known. Though bound and published together, the contributions of Scharff and Moortgat are quite distinct, and are rather differently presented. The latter is about half as long again as the former, and has fuller bibliography and chronological tables; but there is a combined index.

Scharff rightly asks and answers the question, what interest Egyptian history can have for post-war Germany, and stresses the need for wholesale revision in the light of a generation of continual discovery. He keeps close to the
