

Airbus Industrie

PRODUCTS FOR THE NEW DECADE

Airbus Industrie enters the 1980s with a successful market-matched product range, with production steadily increasing to meet demand without sacrificing quality, and determined to provide the full range of cost-effective products its present and future customers will need.

A300

The standard short-medium range wide-body.

In service since 1974 in its market-matched versions, the A300 has set the standards for cost-effectiveness, reliability, quietness and passenger appeal which enabled Airbus Industrie to capture in 1979 the largest manufacturer's share of the short-medium range market by dollar value.

The A300-600 continues the Airbus Industrie product-improvement programme, bringing to the A300 range digital avionics for increased reliability and crew efficiency, advanced materials in secondary structure for reduced airframe weight and improved versions of proven engines for increased economy. The steady product improvement programme maintains A300 modernity, further increases its competitiveness, and ensures commonality within the expanding range of Airbus Industrie products.

A310

The optimized 200-seater

The aerodynamicists of the Airbus Industrie partnership were able to concentrate on tailoring the A310 wing to its task, unconstrained by the need to meet other requirements already ably met by the A300. The no-compromise design philosophy brings full wide-body advantages to routes demanding less capacity than the A300 provides. Full interline cargo capability is retained, using standard interline load devices, while true wide-body comfort is provided for the passengers.

Digital avionics and advanced cockpit design, proven on the A300, also reduce A310 crew workload and improve their efficiency. The A310 benefits in addition from the A300 testing programme, the most extensive ever undertaken by any manufacturer, and is backed by years of profitable, reliable A300 service on the most demanding routes. Benefiting from the Airbus Industrie policy of steady advance, the A310 will enter service lower on the learning curve than an all-new aircraft, ready to earn its keep - fast.
