Colophon Calder-isms Alexander Calder, 2025-09-16 A dazzling collection of quotations from the modern American artist whose mobiles are beloved worldwide Calder isms is a collection of fascinating irreverent and often profound quotations from the influential modern American sculptor Alexander Calder 1898 1976 who is most famous for his invention of what his friend Marcel Duchamp dubbed the mobile Often suspended from ceilings these sculptures feature abstract elements frequently painted in bold colors that move and balance in changing harmony Calder's art was dynamic unconventional and filled with vitality qualities also displayed by his words which combine the wisdom of a philosopher with the ingenuity of a true original Taken from interviews writings and other sources the quotations in Calder isms offer memorable insights into Calder's life mind and above all art Why must art be static You look at an abstraction sculptured or painted an intensely exciting arrangement of planes spheres nuclei entirely without meaning It would be perfect but it is always still The next step in sculpture is motion That visit to Mondrian gave me the shock that converted me It was like the baby being slapped to make his lungs start working A mobile has no utility and no meaning It is simply beautiful It has a great emotional effect if you understand it Of course if it meant anything it would be easier to understand but it would not be worthwhile A title is just like the license plate on the back of a car You use it to say which one you're talking about People think monuments should come out of the ground never out of the ceiling but mobiles can be monumental too Bad taste always boomerangs Alexander Calder Alexander Calder, 1962 Calder Alexander Calder, Ugo Mulas, Pier Giovanni Castagnoli, 2009 This book features the work of Alexander Calder one of the most celebrated and influential sculptors of our times whose illustrious career spanned the twentieth century Calder used his innovative genius to change and profoundly revolutionise the course of modern art anticipating performance art by more than forty years and breathing life into a completely new genre with the first kinetic sculpture Alexander Calder and Contemporary Art Lynne Warren, Alexander Calder, 2010 The first publication to explore Calder's significance for artists who emerged in the mid 1990s and the early twenty first century A Salute to Alexander Calder Alexander Calder, Museum of Modern Art (New York, N.Y.), 1969 Alexander Calder Dore Ashton, Alexander Calder, 2010-08 Text by Dore Ashton Alexander Calder Alexander Calder, 1971 Calder at Home, 1998 With photographs of Calder and his wife Louisa in their homes in Roxbury Connecticut and Sach France taken from 1963 to 1976 Calder at Home shows how Calder extended his unbounded creativity and enthusiasm to every corner of his existence from living room hearth to dining table from kitchen to bathroom from studio ceiling to studio floor Jacket The Intimate World of Alexander Calder Daniel Marchesseau, Alexander Calder, 1989 Calder Alexander Calder, 1966 Alexander Calder artist creator of stabile and mobile sculptures marvelous juggler of form and space needs no introduction With the casual informality loved by his intimates the man who changed the direction of art in our time tells the story of his life and work in his 1966 autobiography In the new introduction for this edition Jean Davidson Calder's son in law speaks of this innovative artist's life revealing glimpses of the man, his art and his sense of approaching death Publisher's description

Alexander Calder James Johnson Sweeney, 1943      Alexander Calder: Modern from the Start, 2021-03 On Alexander Calder's fruitful creative and enduring relationship with MoMA from the early wire sculptures to late abstractions Alexander Calder's work first appeared in the Museum of Modern Art's galleries in 1930 in the exhibition Painting and Sculpture by Living Americans. Over the next decades the artist's connection with the Museum would be deep, productive and mutually beneficial. Calder cultivated friendships and working relationships with notable figures including Alfred H. Barr Jr., the Museum's founding director and James Johnson Sweeney with whom he collaborated on his expansive retrospective exhibition in 1943. His work is imprinted on MoMA's early history not only for its material and conceptual innovation but also for its presence at significant moments such as a mobile made to hang over the lobby's grand staircase on the occasion of the new Goodwin and Stone building, Loxter Trap and Fish Tail which hangs there to this day, an elaborate candelabra to adorn the tables at a celebratory anniversary event and a sculpture to fly off a flagpole to advertise the landmark exhibition Cubism and Abstract Art. Alexander Calder: Modern from the Start celebrates this extraordinarily fertile relationship between an institution and an artist who was both an important creative partner and, with his magnificent gift of 19 works in 1966, a major donor. Through MoMA, Calder came to be known as a pioneer of modern sculpture and through Calder, MoMA came to understand itself as an American museum of modern art. After studying engineering, Alexander Calder (1898-1976) moved to Paris in the late 1920s where he found himself at the center of the city's artistic avant-garde. There he developed his Cirque Calder, a performance artwork comprising dozens of miniature handmade objects and a group of standalone figurative works in wire. Turning toward abstraction in 1930, Calder invented the mobile, an abstract sculpture made of independent parts that incorporate natural or mechanical movement. He would continue to explore the possibilities of this visual language for the rest of his career, eventually shifting to monumental constructions and public works.      Calder's Universe Alexander Calder, Jean Lipman, 1980      Calder Alexander Calder, Ugo Mulas, H. H. Arnason, 1971 For many years Alexander Calder has been widely recognized not only as an extraordinarily imaginative, original and powerful sculptor but also as an artist of world stature. As with many contemporary artists of the front rank, his scope is wide and the decorative qualities of his recent gouaches are as striking and authoritative as the mobiles which first brought him fame. It was Calder who introduced the concept of movement into sculpture. An American who was first trained as an engineer, he has lived much in Europe where, during the early 1930s, he was decisively influenced by Mondrian's art. Its severe rectangular forms caused him to wonder how fine it would be if everything there moved. Combining his engineering skill with a remarkable plastic sense, he then evolved his mobiles, suspended constructions of delicately balanced rods, wires and metal plates set in motion either mechanically or by air currents. Calder creates a fantasy world which delights the spectator with its suggestion of natural forms and with its subtle, ever-changing spatial relationships. Equally individual are his stationary works of sculpture, often executed on a large scale but never at the cost of grace and airiness In this full survey of Calder s work the photographs by Ugo Mulas who has made a special study of contemporary artists represent the work of many years and were taken against the background of Calder s homes and studios The introductory text is by the Vice President of the Guggenheim Museum New York who is one of the outstanding authorities on twentieth century art This book consequently forms a unique record of the life and creations of a great artist and a most remarkable man     Alexander Calder.
