Writing Groups for Doctoral Education and Beyond Claire Aitchison,Cally Guerin,2014-04-24 Writing is the principal means by which doctoral candidature is monitored and measured this combined with the growing tendency to use publications as proxy measures of individual and institutional productivity underlines the centrality of writing in academia One of the central questions for scholars in higher education therefore is How do we make writing happen and it is this question which the book seeks to answer The book provides detailed illustrations of collaborative writing pedagogies which are powerfully enabling and through theoretical and conceptual interrogation of these practices the authors point the way for individuals as well as institutions to establish writing groups that are lively responsive and context specific Key topics include new pedagogical responses for increased writing productivity and the push to publish innovations for supporting academic writing quality confidence and output scaffolding the thesis writing process new theoretical explorations of collaborative writing approaches writing group formulations and pedagogical approaches writing groups for non native speakers of English writing as women in higher education A particular strength of this book is that it showcases the potential of writing groups for advanced academic writing by pulling together a unique mix of authors and scholarly approaches representing a wide range of new theoretical and pedagogical frames from diverse countries Writing Groups for Doctoral Education and Beyond will be attractive to academics seeking new ways to advance their writing productivity doctoral students their supervisors and those who are tasked with the job of supporting them through the completion and dissemination of their research

Academic and Professional Writing in an Age of Accountability Shirley Wilson Logan,Wayne H. Slater,2018-12-27 What current theoretical frameworks inform academic and professional writing What does research tell us about the effectiveness of academic and professional writing programs What do we know about existing best practices What are the current guidelines and procedures in evaluating a program's effectiveness. What are the possibilities in regard to future research and changes to best practices in these programs in an age of accountability? Editors Shirley Wilson Logan and Wayne H. Slater bring together leading scholars in rhetoric and composition to consider the history, trends, and future of academic and professional writing in higher education through the lens of these five central questions. The first two essays in the book provide a history of the academic and professional writing program at the University of Maryland. Subsequent essays explore successes and challenges in the establishment and development of writing programs at four other major institutions, identify the features of language that facilitate academic and professional communication, look at the ways digital practices in academic and professional writing have shaped how writers compose and respond to texts, and examine the role of assessment in curriculum and pedagogy. An afterword by distinguished rhetoric and composition scholars Jessica Enoch and Scott Wible offers perspectives on the future of academic and professional writing. This collection takes stock of the historical, rhetorical, linguistic, digital, and evaluative aspects of the teaching of writing in higher education. Among the critical issues addressed are how university writing programs were first established and what early challenges they faced; where writing programs were housed and who administered them; how the language backgrounds of composition students inform the way writing is taught; the ways in which current writing technologies create new digital environments; and how student learning and programmatic outcomes should be assessed.

First-Year Composition Deborah Coxwell-Teague, Ronald F. Lunsford, 2014-05-01. First Year Composition: From Theory to Practice's combination of theory and practice provides readers an opportunity to hear twelve of the leading theorists in composition studies answer in their own voices the key question of what it is they hope to accomplish in a first-year composition course. In addition, these chapters and the accompanying syllabi provide rich insights into the classroom practices of these theorists.
